Renovations underway at Bay city hall

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK
Extensive renovations at Bay St. Louis City Hall are underway.

Work upstairs is complete except for painting and addition of some shelves, Bay Mayor Victor J. Frankiewicz Jr. said Saturday.

Already completed is a computer room and extra office space which replaces a large and mostly unused vault area.

"Downstairs we plan to completely revamp the floor plan to make room for the building inspectors office and court clerk along with the department of public works and the utility department," he said.

These changes will put all offices that the public has to deal with on a day to day basis on the first floor of city hall, Frankiewicz added.

"This is the first comprehensive revamp of floor plans since 1965 and in the process of remodeling we are going to try to go back to a design that is much more respectful of the building's original design," he said.

Frankiewicz said this work is connected with work scheduled at the Valena C. Jones Complex.

"Once we move the building inspector's office to city hall, there will be space available to move the police department to the front of the building next door to the fire department where it should be," he said.

Frankiewicz says the remodeling is going very slowly because it is being done mostly by city crews on the weekend and at night.

"We are trying not to interrupt day to day operations at city hall any more than necessary," he said.

Work at city hall began at the first of January and should be completed within the next couple of months.

Remodeling and repairs at VCJ will begin then.

"We want to consolidate city services in whatever ways possible to save money," Frankiewicz said.

"This was one of the reasons we moved the building inspector's office to city hall," he added.

In this office's present location at VCJ, there is no clerical support and not enough work in this office to justify hiring anyone, Frankiewicz said.

And it is too far away from city hall to be adequately served by clerical workers at city hall, he added.

Other advantages to having this office at city hall is that all offices will be on the same telephone system and have access to the same copying machine, typewriters, etc., Frankiewicz said.

At VCJ, one of the first repairs to be made is the installation of a new roof where needed including the former civil defense offices, the police department, and an area presently occupied by public works department, he said.

Other plans at VCJ include relocating several walls to make the former school building more operational as office area.

Frankiewicz said there will be some reshuffling of space occupied by the various tenants in the complex but these will continue to have all the space they need.

Senior citizens offices, some activities rooms and employment security services are among the offices to be moved elsewhere in the Post office, Diamondhead burglary suspects nabbed

By ELLIS CUEVAS

Two persons were apprehended Friday in connection with the Jan. 18 burglary of the Clermont Harbor Post Office.

Anthony Woodward, 19, P.O. Box 612, Clermont Harbor and a 16-year-old juvenile were arrested for the burglary of the post office, Hancock County Criminal Investigator Delbert Seay said.

Woodward who was arrested by Seay and a Postal Investigator, is lodged in the Hancock County Jail awaiting an initial appearance before a Justice Court Judge on Monday.

Money orders which were removed from the Post Office during the burglary were cashed in Arabi, La.

The juvenile was turned over to Hancock County Youth Court officials.

DIAMONDHEAD BURGLARY
Two Louisiana residents were also arrested Friday in connection with the burglary of a Diamondhead residence.

Anthony Vaughn Sanders, 2412 Hickory Ave, Metairie, La., and Anthony St. Roman, Route 2, Box 452, LaCombe, La. were arrested by Hancock County Criminal Investigator Nathan Hoda on burglary charges, Seay stated.

In an initial appearance before Justice Court Judge Joe Dobson, bonds for Sanders and St. Roman were set at $10,000 each.

Both were still lodged in the Hancock County Jail on Saturday morning.

CITY HALL RENOVATIONS—The Bay St. Louis City Hall computer is moved from the first floor to a new room on the second floor in the first phase of renovations at city hall. Bay St. Louis Mayor Victor J. Frankiewicz

Jr. says the renovations are being made to provide easier public access to frequently visited city offices. (Staff photo by Brenda Heathcock)

Hwy. 603 hearing to be rescheduled

By DENA BISNETTE

A Mississippi State Highway Department public hearing regarding the four-laning of Highway 603 is being rescheduled.

The Hancock County Board of Supervisors was notified of the rescheduling on Friday afternoon, the same day as a board meeting where they announced that the hearing had been set for 7 p.m. Feb. 16, which is Mardi Gras.

"Nobody will be here," Board President Ronald Cuevas complained.

Board Attorney Gerald Gex said he had called trying to get the date of the hearing changed and was told it might not be possible.

He mentioned a response beginning "Marty who?"

The public meeting had already been advertised in a Sea Coast Echo legal notice.

The location of the meeting, the courtroom of the Hancock County Courthouse, will probably remain the same.

The purpose of the hearing, according to a letter from John R. Tabb, the director of the highway department, is to allow public input on a proposal to four-lane 603, also called Highway 43, from US-90 Interstate 10.

The project proposal calls for the reconstruction and realignment of

New equipment purchases may save county money

By DENA BISNETTE

Preliminary information from a study by Hancock County Maintenance Superintendent Bill Johnson indicates that the county may be able to save money by buying new road equipment.

Johnson reported to the board of supervisors Friday that he had completed a survey of the southern part of county and found about 158 miles of paved road and 153 miles of unpaved road.

Johnson had been asked by the board to find out how much money could be saved on maintenance if more or all of the roads in the county could be paved.

One of the major expenses of the county's maintenance program is the repair of older equipment. He said much of the equipment is more than 20 years old and the cost of the repairs, even if they are done in-house, are reducing the amount of money that can be spent on actual work.

One problem he pointed out is a constant need to grade the unpaved roads. During the beat system, one to two motor graders were being used in each of the five beats at any given time to grade the unpaved roads.

With new equipment, the cost of repairs, fuel, and the number of operators needed can be reduced. Johnson is estimating that two graders will be enough to cover the south end of the county.

"We want to try to replace three machines with two," he said.

He explained that the board tries to grade roads once a week, if weather and machine conditions permit.

The board's plans are to allow Johnson to sell the old equipment after purchasing new machines out of budgeted funds.

Johnson said the new machines are considerably more efficient and maneuverable because they are hydraulic rather than mechanical.

He also hopes to be able to purchase new tractors and mowers and use them in the same manner as the State Highway Department does, with a side-mount mower and a pull-behind mower on the same tractor to cut more grass with fewer turns.

He said about five of those should be able to cover the county in a four-to-six-week cutting rotation.

Using the mowers together in the same location, Johnson said the operators will be able to help each other if a machine gets bogged down, can park the machines overnight where they have finished working and can ride together to and from the worksite.

Johnson is presently verifying cost estimates on the plan, but said it cost about $12,000 a month last year just for grading if grader repairs, operator salaries and fuel costs are included.

With new machines, little or no maintenance is needed for the first 18 months to two years.

"We feel one of the best ways to decrease costs is to increase productivity," Board President Ronald Cuevas said.

In other business, the board:

—Took bids for a computer for the county's E-911 system under advisement;

—Accepted the retirement of tax

Masonic, patrol honors Mark Naylor burial Saturday

Funeral services for T.P. Naylor, 61, of Long Beach, retired senior investigator for Mississippi Highway Patrol, were conducted Saturday afternoon at Riemann Funeral Home Chapel in Gulfport.

Burial followed in Floral Hills Memorial Gardens in Gulfport with Masonic rites and Highway Patrol honors.

Mr. Naylor, who had worked closely with Hancock County law enforcement agencies for the past several years, died Wednesday, Jan. 28, 1988 in Gulfport.

Hancock County Sheriff Ronald Peterson in commenting on Naylor's death, said, "T.P. was always a big help to us in law enforcement in Hancock County. He is probably the finest law enforcement officer I have ever been associated with."

"When I started in law enforcement in 1972, T.P. was the person who taught me everything I knew about drug enforcement. He was very knowledgeable in drug enforcement and all phases of the law," Peterson added.

"Whenever we had a big case in Hancock County, all we had to do was give T.P. a call and he would drop everything and be at our side helping us in anyway possible."

"T.P.'s whole life was centered around law enforcement—he had no hobbies," the sheriff noted.

"He assisted Hancock County in hundreds of various types of crimes, and we all have missed him since his very much earned retirement in 1987," Peterson stated.

A native of Meridian, Mr. Naylor joined the Highway Patrol in 1948 as a radio operator in Batesville. He subsequently worked as a driver's license examiner, a patrolman and an investigator.

In 1960, Mr. Naylor was the first member of the Mississippi Highway Patrol to attend a federal narcotics school. He graduated from the FBI National Academy in 1965.

When the Highway Patrol formed a narcotics unit in 1968, Mr. Naylor was appointed unit director and assistant director of the internal affairs division.

Mr. Naylor became a senior member of the highway Patrol's Bureau of Criminal Investigations, and in 1981 was promoted to senior investigator of the 8th district, headquartered in Gulfport.

He retired from the Highway Patrol in 1986.

He was past president of the FBI National Academy Associates of Mississippi and of the Mississippi Law Enforcement Officers Association.

He also was a member of the Mississippi-Tennessee Peace Officers Association and the National Sheriffs Association.

He was a 32nd degree Mason, a member of the Southern Star Lodge in Long Beach and of the Joppa Shrine Temple.

Survivors include his wife, Margaret Cowan Naylor of Long Beach; one son, Richard T. Naylor of Colorado Springs, Colo.; one daughter, Mrs. Denise Witt of Dallas; his mother, Hazel Naylor of Long Beach; two sisters, Mrs. Hazel Barrett of Selma, Ala., and Mrs. Billie Hohnstrier of Pass Christian; two brothers, Eugene F. Naylor Jr. of Dallas and Clifton R. Naylor of Lafayette, La.; and one granddaughter.

It will be hard to top the all-county participation of Mississippians during Tree Planting Week events this past year, but sponsors of the Magnolia State's annual "Celebration of Trees" say they'll be trying.

At the recent annual planning meeting of the State Tree Planting and Forest Development Committee dates for Tree Planting Week-1988 were announced as February 12-19. It has become customary during the 13-year history of the event to start the ceremonial week of tree planting on Arbor Day (always the second Friday in February).

Gale Martin, Executive Director of the Mississippi Association of Conservation District (MACD), primary sponsoring agency, said the local Soil and Water Conservation District, Mississippi Forestry Commission, U.S. Forest Service, Garden Clubs of Mississippi, U.S. Soil Conservation Service, various forest Industries and many other cooperating community businesses, civic groups and schools, will again be involved in all 82 counties.

Once again this year the Hancock County Soil and Water Conservation District and the Mississippi Forestry Commission will be giving away free hardwood trees. This year they will have more trees to give away thanks to Hancock Bank who donated the funds to purchase more trees.

Trees will be distributed at the offices of the Soil Conservation Service located on Hwy 603 in Kiln and the Mississippi Forestry Commission located on Dunbar Ave in the rear of the old hospital. Because of the large demand we experience every year, please limit 3 trees per household.

Molpus makes campaign stop in Starkville

Speaking in Starkville to the State Young Farmer's Conference this week, U.S. Senate candidate Dick Molpus called for a concentrated effort to attract and construct new processing facilities for Mississippi agricultural products.

"Mississippi produces a wide range of valuable agricultural products, yet most of the processing of these homegrown resources takes place outside our state. As a result a tremendous source of jobs and income for Mississippi's people is lost," Molpus said.

Molpus, who is Mississippi's Secretary of State, went on to cite his record of achievement in fighting for top-notch public schools for Mississippi children as a key to long range economic development and job creation in the state.

It looks like days gone by when one visits the City of Waveland these days.

Everyone appears to be getting ready for the many Centennial celebrations coming up the next few months.

Some are growing beards, (while others are trying), so some folks just do not look the same.

I saw Mayor Longo this week and did not recognize him because of his new mustache. Really thought he was someone else, whom I will not disclose.

I went a week without a shave in Egypt a few weeks ago and my salt-and-pepper-looking growth, (mostly salt), was about to drive me up a pyramid.

Thinking back a few years, 30 as a matter of fact, I can remember the fun everyone had when the City of Bay St. Louis Centennial was celebrated.

It can be a very fun time for those getting involved, and I hope all of the residents of Waveland will get involved with the celebrations.

Since I am a native of Waveland and have lived there for more than 29 years, I plan on getting into some of the excitement of the Centennial.

The City of Waveland has been really growing in recent years, and the residents are very proud of their city.

We will be telling you about many of the events to come in the next several months.

It was a great honor for Hancock County this week with the visit of American Legion National Commander John P. (Jake) Comer.

Commander Comer visited Waveland's American Legion Post on Wednesday morning for breakfast; Standard's Post at noon for lunch; and Bay St. Louis' Post for dinner.

This is the second year in a row the three Hancock County American Legion posts have had the honor of having a visit from the National American Legion Commander.

Legionnaires, Auxiliary members and guests were all impressed about how friendly Commander Comer was during his visit.

He tried to visit with everyone and personally spoke to each one at every function.

All Legionnaires and Auxiliary members should be very proud of our National American Legion Commander Comer.

I am still having many folks inquire about my recent vacation in Jordan, Israel and Egypt.

It would take many months to tell about the many things Jane and I did during the 18-day journey.

It is good to get away from the regular grind for a few days, and even better when it is close to three weeks.

Vacations are very good, but it sure is taking some time to catch up on everything since I have returned home and back to work.

Our vacation was the greatest Jane and I have ever had and we may return some day to the Holy Land.

Eyes on Mississippi

By Bill Minor

BY BILL MINOR

JACKSON—Gov. Ray Mabus may find he has a tiger by the tail if he pursues his proposal to convert $32 million in fuel taxes from the State Aid Road program to help fund his $198 million education package.

Mabus last week came out with his long-awaited plan for funding teacher pay raises to the existing Southeastern states' average and boosting funds for higher education and junior colleges, all without a tax increase.

One of the biggest chunks of money Mabus put into the funding plan was to dip into the $45 million in fuel taxes that now accrue annually to the State Aid Road program and take $32 million in cash for education, replacing that amount with general obligation bonds.

Apparently the $32 million in bonds would be funded over 20 years by taking $4 million a year out of the $13 million remaining in the program.

Mabus' proposal is to grab the $32 million as a one-time windfall. After making the one diversion, the taxes would again be dedicated to the State Aid system.

Some legislators have already begun to question the wisdom of the proposed fiscal maneuver, because it would interrupt the 28-year history of the highly successful rural road system as a pay-as-you-go program.

The idea of using petroleum taxes for a general fund purpose such as education also is a reversal of long-standing state policy that road user taxes would only be spent on roads.

Ironically, the State Aid Road program from the time it was launched in 1950 until last year was funded by a diversion of state sales taxes. It was changed to the petroleum tax source at the time that the $1.6 billion 4-lane highway program was passed in 1987.

It is not commonly understood that while the State Aid Road program is administered at the state level, it is totally independent of the State Highway Commission.

And while it is uniquely limited to improvement of county roads, it is not under the fiscal control of the county boards of supervisors.

The legislation that created the State Aid Road system in 1949, provided for creation of a division in the state highway department headed by a gubernatorially-appointed director who would administer the program virtually autonomously.

Initially the system was limited to 11,656 miles with each county allotted a percentage of the total mileage. The county allotment formula has remained intact all these years, but the total mileage was increased to 23,313 miles along the way.

As of last June 30, a total of 12,623.7 miles of rural roads in the system had been improved at a total cost of $981.3 million.

The original concept of the program was to provide a "farm to market" system of hard-surface or good gravel roads for farmers to get their products to the main highways. Although the farm-to-market concept is no longer the primary objective, the State Aid roads have become the backbone of rural transportation.

A 1978 Legislative Audit Committee report had credited the State Aid program with having brought "social and economic change to the rural areas through its improved system of roads."

Many rural citizens of the state believe that the State Aid roads next to public education have done more for the public good than any other state program.

Close observers of the rural road program agree, however, that if the program had been turned over to the counties and not kept under state oversight and control, it would not have been done as successfully.

One big thing that has gone awry is the original objective of the program: that it would be completed by 1962 and turned over by the state to the counties for maintenance. Once the total mileage in the system was doubled in 1962, it became apparent that the state would never get out from under the program.

So much so, nothing can raise more of an oldtime urban-rural donnybrook in the Legislature than to bring up the subject of tampering with the State Aid Road program funds or cutting back on the state's commitment to fund the program.

"It's a very emotional issue that a lot of people would rather not touch," state Rep. John Pennebaker of New Albany, the House Transportation Committee chairman, said last week.

Child care centers must be licensed

Every weekday, almost 54,000 Mississippi children under age six make their "home away from home" in 1,176 licensed day care facilities statewide.

Placing children in day care centers is a matter of choice for some families—and a necessity for others.

"For single parents and families who rely on two incomes, some type of day care is a must," said Jane Emiling, director of the Mississippi State Department of Health Child Care and Special Licensure Branch.

"And while it may be emotionally difficult to leave a child under someone else's supervision for four or more hours a day, mothers and fathers can assure their children of a healthy and safe environment—thanks to the Mississippi Child Care Licensing Law," Emiling added.

Mandated in 1972, the Mississippi Child Care Licensing Law prescribes minimum standards for child care facilities and provides regulating and licensing authority to the State Department of Health.

As defined in the law, a child care facility is "a place which provides shelter and personal care for six or more children... for four or more hours of any part of a 24-hour-day." These children must be under six years of age and not closely related to the operator.

Child care facilities include day nurseries, day care centers, and any other facility that meets the above definition—whether operating for profit or not.

Licensing provides for some relief on the parent's part in knowing their choice is approved by a regulating authority. But mothers and fathers should also assess the caregiver, setting and day care activities when making their choice.

"The operator—or caregiver—should be well-trained, warm, and loving towards children," Emiling advised. "Parents should look for someone who stimulates and encourages their child's interests."

Whether day care takes place in a home or a child care center, the facilities should be safe and free of unhealthy conditions. Local health and fire departments inspect and approve licensed centers.

The center must be properly heated and ventilated, well lit, and provide bathrooms and a diaper changing area. In addition, nap beds or pads should be sanitary; the operator must clean blankets and sheets after each use.

"Furniture, games, and toys should be in good repair and void of sharp edges, splinters, and poisonous paint," Emiling warned.

Activities that encourage mental, physical, social, and emotional growth signal good day care.

"The activities should be suited to the child's age," the director said, "and groups need to be small enough to allow each child individual attention."

State Department of Health gives every child who attends day care that individual attention through regulations that stipulate all children attending day care centers be immunized. Immunization records from the county health department can go directly to the day care center.

The 1988 State Department of Health legislative agenda includes a proposal to fund more staff and, therefore, further insure children a safe and healthy day care environment.

Emiling also advised parents to make sure day care center personnel are trained in emergency first aid procedures such as control of bleeding, accidental poisoning, choking, and animal bites.

"We have provided care centers with guidelines for emergency care, regulations governing licensure, and the minimum standards for nutritional care," said the director of Child Care and Special Licensure.

"But the parents of children with special needs—such as diabetics requiring insulin shots or those who are physically impaired—need to investigate further to make sure their child's needs will be met," Emiling suggested.

Even though the State Department of health has licensing authority, parents have the final "say so" in choosing an appropriate day care center.

"The best advice to give mothers and fathers is to research different facilities. Ask questions—even if they seem trivial," Emiling said. "Make sure the facility offers things they consider important. And, most importantly, make sure they're licensed."

The State Department of Health publishes a pamphlet entitled "Parent's Checklist For Day Care." This checklist is designed to help mothers and fathers judge the qualities they deem important in finding the right day care center for their child and is available through the agency.

Readers needing further information on selecting a child care center may contact the Mississippi State Department of Health Child Care and Special Licensure, P.O. Box 1700, Jackson, Mississippi 39215-1700.

The People's Business

From Mississippi Economic Council

MAKING GOVERNMENT WORK BETTER

Governor Ray Mabus, speaking before a joint session of the Legislature, challenged lawmakers to make this the "year of making government work better."

In his State of the State address, the governor identified four areas in need of legislation to achieve this goal.

One of the four areas in need of reform the governor cited was the executive branch of state government. This is one area that has long been a problem and has long been overlooked. During his speech, Mabus quoted the late Governor Mike Conner, who, in 1932, was calling for reform of the executive branch due to inefficiency, decentralization of authority and duplication of services.

Mabus then noted, "It is unchanged today except to be compounded by 56 more years of the same."

The plan the governor has proposed includes establishment of a 25-member commission to recommend a means to consolidate the executive branch from 135 state agencies to 15, with these recommendations due next fall.

The Mississippi Economic Council has proposed a series of 60 constitutional amendments that are the result of a year-long study performed by the Council at the request of House leaders during the 1987 session. Included in the proposed amendments is a plan to reform the executive branch.

If enacted these amendments would strengthen the enforcement powers of the governor and would add the authority to require public officials to enforce laws of local governments.

MEC also recommends a fixed number of executive departments with the departments to be headed either by an elected state official or an official appointed by the governor.

Mississippians should accept the governor's challenge with enthusiasm.

This should be the "year of making government work better."

Small child affected by officer's attitude

Jan. 25, 88
Editor
Sea Coast Echo

Dear Editor,

We have always been told to teach our children that if they are lost or feel threatened by someone, they should tell a police officer. We also teach them, "Policemen are your friends, you should trust them."

Is this trust warranted? Will your child believe this? Don't count on it.

This morning en route to school, I was stopped for a traffic violation. As I was driving away, my five-year-old son turned to me and said, "That was a mean man." He was right. The officer was very discourteous, rude, and had an arrogant attitude.

Although I realize this is not the attitude of all police officers, how can I possibly tell my son, "This is your friend, trust him?"

If your small child is lost or in trouble, whom will he turn to, a nice friendly stranger, who may abduct him, or a "mean man?"

Sincerely yours,
Louita Granger

Mississippi Coast Coliseum to host indoor golf clinic

Mississippi Coast Coliseum and Convention Center officials have announced that February 1988 marks the beginning of the world's largest indoor golf clinic.

Over 25,000 square feet of floor space will be dedicated to this "first-of-its-kind" clinic which boasts "Rain or Shine, you can always golf on the Mississippi Gulf Coast."

The indoor clinic is sponsored by the Mississippi Coast Coliseum Commission, the Mississippi Coast Golf Pro Association, RAM Golf Corporation and the Mississippi Hotel Motel Association.

It is designed to provide coastal residents and visitors the opportunity to improve their golf skills on days of inclement weather.

Working in conjunction with area hotels, golf pros and radio and television stations, a network has been established to inform guests which days the indoor golf clinic is available.

The staff of the Mississippi Coast Coliseum and Convention Center will have a minimum of two hours' notice to set up the clinic. It will consist of a 36'x 58' undulating putting green, mats and nets for driving and chipping, sand traps, rules seminars, video-play instruction, training films and assistance from at least five golf pros at each session.

For those golfers wishing to take a break, refreshments will be served and films of highlights from the U.S. Open and other PGA tournaments will be available for viewing.

"It is our intention to offer an option for our golfers on rainy days," said Bill Holmes, executive director for the facility. "Last year over 50,000 rounds of golf were played during our winter golf package season alone. This number has steadily risen over the past three years and is expected to continue increasing. We want our visitors to enjoy their favorite pastime regardless of the weather."

The clinic will be offered from Feb. 1 through April 7. Day sessions will run from 11:30 a.m. through 3 p.m. The clinic will also be offered one night per week from 6:30 through 10 p.m.

For information contact the Mississippi Coast Coliseum and Convention Center by calling (601) 388-8010 or write Indoor Golf, P.O. Box 4676, Biloxi, MS 39531.

Nereids Ball depicts "Entertainment U.S.A."

"The world is a stage, and the stage is a world of entertainment." That familiar lyric set the stage for the 22nd Annual Ball Masque of the Krewe of Nereids with the theme "Entertainment U.S.A."

The ball, staged at the Mississippi Coast Coliseum, Saturday, Jan. 23 was a tribute to entertainment in its many forms—from the great white way of Broadway to the sport of a football game complete with half-time pagentry.

At the sound of the Captain's whistle, the 1988 tableaux began to unfold under the symbolic crest of Nereids.

Presentation of the royal court of 1987, recalled last year's salute to the many faces of the old south in the spirited presentation of "And so it was...Dixieland."

Broadway entertainment was brought to the Coliseum through the krewe's version of the memorable show "Cats."

Furry felines prowled down from the audience, while others crept stealthily onto stage hissing and clawing. Soon the cats were leaping and dancing as all joined in an exuberant production number.

The officers and the captain of Nereids were then presented. The officers portrayed the glamorous show girls of the Broadway stage. They were gowned in one-shoulder silver and black sequined tunics and slim black floor length skirts.

The captain, who is the real force behind the carnival organization, was then presented wearing a sheath of red and gold floral patterned brocade encrusted with rhinestones, sequins and beading. The captain, whose identity is kept secret, is responsible for planning and overseeing the entire production of the ball.

The entertainment continued as a Broadway marquee flashed "42nd Street." A dozen pair of tap dancing feet performed a show-stopping up-tempo number to the famous tune. The dancers were costumed in black and white polka dots and sequins.

The tableaux took a turn to the South as country music and dance were represented by three sets of fast moving square dancers.

As the caller put the dancers, clad in bright yellow and red square dance dress, through their paces, the audience got into the spirit with hand clapping and foot stomping.

The electronic entertainment of television was saluted by dancers who burst through a giant television screen to perform a contemporary jazz number representing the hit television show "Fame."

It was on to Hollywood and the make-believe magic of the silver screen as the royal court of 1988, reenacted movie masterpieces.

The first maid, portraying the Egyptian Queen of the Nile, Cleopatra, was intensely beautiful in a lame gown of purple and red.

The open sleeves dropped into a lavish train bordered in silver sequins and accented with red.

She wore a regal sash embellished with the ancient Egyptian ankh and hieroglyphics.

The magnificent headpiece held numerous golden asps and a profusion of lavender ostrich plumes. Her duke, representing Marc Anthony, was clad in appropriate military splendor.

Intriguing English history was the basis for the movie "A Man for All Seasons." The second maid, Anne Boleyn, wore a 16th Century period costume befitting a queen.

It was made of brilliant peacock blue velvet, with panels of petal pink moire. The gown, with its deep peplum, was accented with wide bands of silver sequins. A lace perrot collar adorned her neck.

Her headpiece was of pink and gold sequins topped with white feathers and blue plumes. Henry VIII, renowned King of England, was portrayed by her duke.

"The Greatest Show on Earth," a film classic about the triumphs and heartbreaks of the circus, was represented by a maid costumed in a gown of electrifying colors.

The fitted torso was in intense yellow over rows and rows of brightly colored lame ruffles.

At her hips, bursts of sequins were emphasized with giant yellow plumes. The headpiece featured the familiar face of the circus clown with orange marabou hair and red sequin nose.

Gold plumes encircled the headpiece. The clown face was repeated on the cape of her duke.

Probably the most technologically advanced movie at the time of its release, "Star Wars" was the theme for the next maid portraying Princess Leia.

Her striking black velvet one-shoulder gown was studded with a galaxy of silver sequin stars and rhinestones. At each hip, a cascade of flowing black and white dotted fabric appeared as a meteor shower under a slice of silver moon and a lone star.

Her duke wore a dramatic costume in a matching design.

Shakespeare was the inspiration for "Kiss Me Kate." Nereids' maid portrayed Katherine. She was dressed in all the finery of the Shakespearean rich. Her deep turquoise moire taffeta gown, with tightly fitted bustier, featured a full skirt with diagonally cut hem revealing an underskirt of orange and pink striped taffeta. The leg-of-mutton sleeves were also in stripe.

Her duke, Petruchio, wore an equally authentic costume.

The final maid was the French empress, Josephine. Her white empire bodice gown encrusted with gold bugle beads had red moire puff sleeves edged in delicate gold fringe.

A red moire pleated flounce adorned the hem. The royal blue velvet train was decorated with gold fleur de lls and edged in white ermine; her head was circled in white plumes and gold leaves. She wore a rhinestone tiara.

Napoleon Bonaparte, her duke, rivaled the emperor himself in his red, white and blue French military dress uniform.

Her majesty, Queen Doris XXII, wore a pristine white sheath with ornamental gold braid, bugle beads and Austrian rhinestones.

Her fiery red velvet mantle was banded in gold beads and sequins and carried a gold crest of Nereids.

Her wide collar was a profusion of regal red plumes. Her crown was covered in nine millimeter pearls and accented with more gold beads.

King Nereus XXII, Mr. William B. Whitfield, wore a coat of white and gold and a mantle to match that of his queen.

In the true New Orleans Mardi Gras tradition, the Krewe of Nereids keeps the identity of its queen and her royal maids secret.

Pages to her majesty, Queen Doris XXII, were Miss Ashley Richele Artigues, Master John David Ducrest, Master Patric Cahill Kimbrell and Master Cooper Christian Ladner.

The graceful movements of the ballet were performed next representing cultural entertainment.

Cheerleaders and football players bounded onto the stage in a frenzy of activity. The cheerleaders led the audience in a cheer for a make-believe football team called the Angels then broke into a sideline dance routine.

The Angels kicked off as strobe lights flashed moving the opposing team down on the field.

The halftime entertainment included the appearance of the Statue of Liberty, a marching band, flag bearers and a dancing drill team.

Kevin Champagne of New Orleans is choreographer for the Krewe. Costumes for the court are designed by Carter Church, also of New Orleans.

Sets are designed and executed by Ed Scanlan of Waveland and W.H.B. Spanegenberg Studios of New Orleans.

The parade of the Krewe of Nereids rolls on US-90 in Waveland Sunday Feb. 7 at 2 p.m.

Diamondhead Garden Club

The Diamondhead Garden Club met Jan. 20 with 76 members and 11 guests present. A representative of the "Stop The Dump" movement spoke to the group, presenting strong arguments against it. She urged all of the garden club members who are front-runners in the belief of a continuing safe environment to attend the meeting for the general public on March 11 at the Harrison County Courthouse.

Mrs. Carol Bustetter, who has been asked to be chairman of the Arbor Day observance at Beauvoir, spoke briefly, giving the date as Feb. 12 and urging all members to attend.

Mrs. Mary Cassis, Trees chairman, included in her talk the names of fast-growing trees for this area, some of which are the black gum, Arizona ash, honey locust and Chinese tallow.

Members were asked to sign a petition to keep the Mississippi State Flag exactly as it is, in an effort to combat a movement to have it changed. Mr. Russell Papania, AIFD of New Orleans, will conduct a floral workshop at the Community Center March 30.

Mrs. Ann Neff, program chairman, spoke of events that will be held by the club in the coming months, namely a cruise on the Cajun Queen on March 12, and a trip to Honey Island Swamp on April 13.

Garden of the Month was awarded to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Simonson.

Announcement was made of a cooking school to be held Feb. 27 at the Diamondhead Country Club. Mrs. Terry Thompson, noted cookbook author and cooking school instructor, will conduct a cooking demonstration. The tour following includes four of Diamondhead's most impressive kitchens where food samples and frozen 'Gourmet-to-Go' dishes will be for sale.

Mrs. Diane Calhoun presented the Horticulture Tips for the Month, which included correct procedures to follow when a freeze is imminent; what to plant at this particular time; pruning do's and don't's and other excellent ideas.

The speaker for the day's program was Mrs. B. S. McLemore of Hattiesburg, whose topic was "China Yesterday, China Today." As a member of the United States/China Peoples Friendship Association, she has visited China over a dozen times in recent years. Her fascinating talk acquainted her listeners with the background of the nation, characteristics of the people, and included the rebirth of the Chinese government and its concern for the rehabilitation of their public parks and gardens which have suffered great devastation during the war years and the Cultural Revolution.

The concluding event of the meeting was lunch at the Country Club, honoring Mrs. Betty Claggett, club president, who has been chosen to be Diamondhead's Mardi Gras Queen for 1988.

'This Old House' travels to California project

When Susan and David Dickinson bought their California Craftsman bungalow in 1983, Susan was concerned about all the work the house needed. But last November, their house on Sana Barbara's Figueroa Street was chosen for renovation by the experts of "This Old House," the popular PBS series.

Host Bob Vila and master carpenter Norm Abram joined the Dickinsons just in time to help with a major remodeling project: adding a stair to the attic and building a master bedroom and bath upstairs to make more room downstairs for the latest addition to the family, four-month-old Sam.

The remodeling of the house will be featured in the final six episodes of this season's "This Old House," beginning at 1:30 p.m., Saturday, Feb. 20. The series is underwritten in Mississippi by Frierson Building Supply.

Susan's parents, who live to the East, helped the young couple buy the bungalow partly as an investment for their planned retirement to the charming southern California coastal city.

"David and I were renting an apartment then," Susan said, "and it made sense to buy a house and fix it up. My father was here for only a day and a half, and in that time we had to find a suitable house."

We looked at this one first, and then about six other houses, but all afternoon Dad kept asking questions about the bungalow on Figueroa Street. I wasn't so enthusiastic," she recalled. "The house had been rented for years, and I could see that it needed lots of repairs."

In its favor, however, was the bungalow's prime location, only a few blocks from the center of town and perched atop a knoll in a quiet neighborhood with a fine view of the mountains from the broad front porch.

The house was built in 1923 probably from house plans included in one of the many "bungalow books" popular at the time. The house catalogs were sent all over the country, offering pictures of bungalows with floor plans and construction drawings to be ordered for as little as $5 or $10. Records indicate that William Laskey, a tailor, was the builder and first owner, acting as his own contractor and using hired day laborers to do the work, the cheapest way to build. The total cost of the house was $3,500, inexpensive even for 1923.

Today houses in the Figueroa Street neighborhood where the Dickinsons bought the bungalow sell for $140,000.

The California Craftsman style originated around the turn of the century in an attempt to create a style appropriate to the climate and setting of southern California. The houses, which were first seen in Pasadena, were designed to hug the ground, using natural materials such as unpainted wood and local stone to blend in with the environment.

Exposed beams and rafters lent structural honesty to the design, while broad porches and overhanging eaves sheltered residents from the intense-California sun. The interiors featured prominent fireplaces, numerous windows arranged for good cross-ventilation and built-in bookcases, buffets and window seats.

Abnormal growth requires attention

NEW ORLEANS—Growing up always has its hazards. But for some children, just the process of growing itself can be fraught with difficulties.

Some children are too small for their age, some are too large. And some experience "precocious puberty" when they may exhibit the beginning of sexual development as early as one year of age.

"Until 1980 nothing could be done for these children with precocious puberty problems but research in recent years has provided us some of the answers and we are beginning to understand puberty better," says Dr. Teresa Zimmerman, a pediatric endocrinologist at the Ochsner Clinic, New Orleans.

The whole puberty process begins when a hormone is released in impulses every four hours from the hypothalamus in the brain. The hormone is then transported to the pituitary gland where it stimulates the release of two hormones which govern the growth of the ovaries and testes, Dr. Zimmerman adds.

"Previously, treatments for precocious puberty were not very successful. Now it is possible, by using injections of the same hormone secreted by the hypothalamus, to eliminate the pulsing of the hormone and keep it in the body longer. After two or three weeks of injections there is a more constant concentration of the hormone in the blood and the pituitary then cuts down on the secretion of its two hormones. As a consequence, the signs of puberty diminish and can be controlled," she explains.

"A child who goes through precocious puberty may be large for his or her age when very young but will stop growing at a younger age than the normal child. They become short adults," she says.

Parents frequently ask about vitamin therapy when they bring in a child who is small for his age. But, children don't usually have nutritional reasons for being small. It is more frequently a hormonal problem.

Over three years of age, a child should grow about two inches a year until puberty which occurs usually between 10 and 14 years of age. During puberty they could grow even faster—perhaps as much as three to four inches a year for one or two years. Girls grow about two inches after their menstrual period starts while boys tend to have their biggest growth spurt toward the end of puberty.

When determining whether the stature of a child is in the abnormal range, it is necessary not only to compare his height to other children but also to see how his parents compare with other adults. "We must examine the child carefully to be sure there is no bone abnormality, and we look for any symptoms of hormonal problems or intestinal or kidney diseases. In addition, the parent must bring in all previous records of the child's medical history so that the rate of growth is clear," she points out.

An x-ray of the child's hand frequently reveals the age of the bones as compared to the child's chronological age. "In young children there is a space between the bones in the hand which allows for future growth and development. If it is revealed that the bones are very young, relative to the age, the child may be having some growth impairment due to a deficiency of thyroid hormones which is easier to treat than other hormone deficiencies.

Being excessively small or large is not "just a phase" that a child goes through. Parents should not dismiss the condition for too long. Dr. Zimmerman says that most children with growth problems are brought in to see a doctor, usually their pediatrician, between the ages of five and eight. With older children, there is less than can be done to help them attain normal height.

ETV Brief

GRENADA INVASION

The 1983 U.S. invasion of Grenada. One of the proudest accomplishments of the Reagan Administration. But was it necessary?

ETV's "Frontline" with Judy Woodruff follows Pulitzer Prize-winning reporter Seymour Hersh as he investigates the rescue of American students at 9 p.m., Tuesday, Feb. 2.

Hersh's report on "Operation Urgent Fury" reveals a seemingly inept U.S. military operation and severely questions whether the students needed rescuing at all when it airs on Mississippi ETV.
